LEGEND:

(p)—station had primary affiliation with that network, but carried portions of other network programming also. This arrangement could be found in some small markets, chiefly rural, until the 1980s, when numerous UHF stations signed on, eventually providing all of the country with at least three network affiliates (and later more).

@--located in a region of the state of Indiana that did not observe Daylight Savings Time. The time of broadcast during April-October thus was the same as the Central Time Zone.
